"After the Fact" is a text on the various methods a historian has at his disposal to help interpret the events of the past.
The authors are both historians and History professors specializing in American history, and they draw from the history of the United States to provide illustrations of the concepts they seek to describe.

Art is first of all a word—one that acknowledges both the idea and the fact of art. Without it, we might well ask whether art exists in the first place. The term, after all, is not found in every society. Yet art is made everywhere. Art, therefore, is also an object, but not just any kind of object.
